The Chair will also play an important role in teaching and research supervision of students undergraduate and graduate programs. Service to the department, faculty, University, and community is also expected. The Chair will have the opportunity to be part of a prolific and diverse research environment in CMF, with access to state of the art core infrastructure. Outstanding opportunities for collaboration are available with established research programs in feminist media studies, media activism, environmental media, and film studies.

The successful candidate at the Assistant Professor level must have a record of high-quality peerreviewed publications, external research funding, and effectiveness in teaching at the University level. The successful candidate at the Associate Professor level must have an established body of high-quality peer reviewed publications, external research funding, effectiveness in teaching at the University level, and evidence of effective graduate student supervision (where possible).

The Department of Communication, Media and Film is a research-intensive department with high standards in teaching. We value interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary approaches to research and training, and strongly encourage collaboration.
